Lawyering Skills program. The professor will work collaboratively with other clinical faculty in the lawyering skills program to lay the essential foundation for students' later success in upper-level required experiential, clinical coursework, and practice. This position forms an integral part of a skills-training program, which introduces first-year students to real world legal practice skills including legal writing, research, and analysis, as well as negotiation, mediation, and oral argument.

At least once per academic year, this professor also instructs students in upper-division legal writing courses; such as Writing for Law Practice or Contract Drafting. In lieu of this upper-division legal writing course, this professor may teach one section of a for-JD-credit, bar-preparation course.

This professor also participates actively in other aspects of the upper-division skills curriculum; including simulation courses, mock trial teams, moot court programs, transactional law meet teams, etc.

The clinical associate professor must employ active learning principles, use technology in the classroom, and develop other teaching methods designed to maximize student skills learning. Clinical teaching responsibilities require the instructor to review, to assess, and to provide feedback on a substantial amount of student work. The professor must conference with students outside the classroom.

The position is a clinical professor track position within the law school, which after probationary periods and reviews obtains job security provisions that comply with ABA Standard 405(c). It is designated an unclassified academic staff position within the University's system.

The University of Kansas is especially interested in hiring faculty members who can contribute to the climate of diversity in the School of Law including a diversity of scholarly approaches, and four key campus-wide strategic initiatives: (1) Sustaining the Planet, Powering the World; (2) Promoting Well-Being, Finding Cures; (3) Building Communities, Expanding Opportunities; and (4) Harnessing Information, Multiplying Knowledge. For more information, see <http://www.provost.ku.edu/strategic-plan/initiatives>. Women, minorities, and candidates who will contribute to the climate of diversity in the School of Law, including diversity of scholarly artistic approaches are especially encouraged to apply.

The successful candidate for the position must be eligible to work in the U.S. prior to the start of the position.
