housed in one of Canada's top research universities. It is western Canada's oldest law school. The city of Winnipeg is culturally rich and diverse, steeped in the arts, and has long-standing and deep connections with Indigenous Nations.

The successful candidate will contribute to teaching, research, and pedagogical development.

Areas of teaching and research interest

The Faculty welcomes applications from all candidates with demonstrated excellence in teaching and research. We especially invite applications from those with interests in international trade law and international business transactions. Topics of interest may include international economic law, international monetary law, financial regulation, intellectual property, international commercial dispute resolution, international development, investment law, international competition law, telecommunications law, international tax law, environmental law and/or sustainable development, sovereign debt and restructuring, business & human rights, and business, law & technology (e.g. supply chain and artificial intelligence).

Candidates should express whether they are also able to contribute to the private law curriculum and business & human rights curriculum across the JD (Juris Doctor), Masters of Law (LLM) and Master of Human Rights (MHR) programs. The successful applicant will develop a focused research program preferably intersecting with or complementing their teaching duties. The position is expected to commence on July 1, 2025, or on a date mutually agreed upon. Salary will be commensurate with experience and qualifications. The successful candidate will contribute to teaching, service, research, and pedagogical development.

In addition, the successful candidate, as Chair, will serve on the Business Program Advisory Committee along with other faculty members to manage the budget of the business programs across the Asper Chair and Desautels Centre for Private Enterprise and the Law portfolios.

Responsibilities include the ability to:

- Conduct research in the areas articulated above and teaching courses, seminars, and developing programs in the areas of international trade law and international business transactions;
- Teach in the private law core of the JD curriculum;
- Potential to teach elective and graduate programs related to the areas articulated above;
- Supervise and advise graduate students' research;
- Engage in service work in the Faculty, University, or broader practice/professional community;
- Advance the mission of the Asper Chair including developing a digital knowledge presence in the area, developing connections with the business school, raising the profile of the program through
